Cambridge has received this week a most welcome visitor in the person of Lieut-General Sir John French, who is now stationed at Aldershot in command of the 1st Army Corps. On Monday evening he was the guest of the Head Quarter Companies of the 3rd (Cambridgeshire) Volunteer Battalion Suffolk Regiment. The Guildhall was well filled by the members of the Battalion, their friends and guests, who assembled to witness the annual distribution of prizes. The officer at present commanding the Cambridge Companies is Major G. F. Whitmore, who will be remembered as Captain in charge of the Suffolk Volunteer Company in South Africa. After presenting the prizes Sir John French spoke as a great General, briefly and frankly. He paid a kindly tribute to the good work done by the Suffolks in his division during the war, and then urged that all classes of Society at home might and should take a fair share in the task of Imperial defence, if not by personal service, at least by facilitating and furthering the service of others. Upon the Volunteers present he impressed the necessity of a threefold training: of body, mind and marksmanship. On Tuesday the Borough conferred distinction upon itself, no less than upon its visitor, by adding his name to the roll of Honorary Freemen. In the course of his speech as a Freeman Sir John French...
